

Judy Rader

Senior Vice President, Corporate Affairs
and Chief Communications Officer

As Senior Vice President, Corporate Affairs and Chief Communications Officer, Judy Rader leads integrated marketing communications strategy, planning and execution for Constellation and manages the company's brand and reputation. She serves on the Constellation Executive Committee, which sets strategy and direction for the company.

Rader's team of about 60 professionals has expertise across a wide range of corporate affairs disciplines, including: reputation and brand management, advertising, customer marketing, employee communications, media relations, issues/crisis management, digital/social media, community relations, charitable giving and foundation management. Under her leadership, the team is responsible for enhancing and protecting Constellation's reputation with all internal and external stakeholders, strengthening Constellation's brand awareness and favorability, fostering employee trust and engagement, and advancing the company's policy and business objectives through compelling communications, marketing and community support.

As part of her role, she oversees Constellation's philanthropic activities, including more than $23 million in annual company, employee and foundation giving and the volunteer efforts of the company's nearly 16,500 employees. She also serves as executive director of the Constellation Energy Foundation.

Constellation is America's largest producer of reliable and clean energy, with more than 55,000 megawatts of generating capacity from nuclear, wind, solar, natural gas, geothermal and hydro assets. The company also serves more than 2.5 million homes, businesses and public sector customers nationwide, including three-fourths of the Fortune 100.

Professional Background

Rader previously served as Exelon's senior vice president of corporate affairs, communications and philanthropy and oversaw all strategic communications and philanthropy for what was then a Fortune 100 energy company and all its operating companies. In this role, Rader oversaw the company's communications strategies and execution including the spin-off of Constellation from Exelon.

After joining Exelon in 2005, Rader held several roles of increasing responsibility, including leadership positions in communications at ComEd, Exelon Corp. and Exelon Generation.

Prior to joining Exelon in 2005, Rader was vice president in the corporate practice at global communications firm Edelman, working with a variety of blue-chip clients, including Kraft Foods, Allstate and Boeing. She's also held positions at several other public relations agencies.

Community Work

Rader is a member of the board of directors and chair of the marketing committee for the Illinois Holocaust Museum and Education Center, and a member of the National Council on Radiation Protection and Measurements, PAC 7 Committee on Radiation Education, Risk Communication and Outreach.

Educational Background

Rader has a master's degree in integrated marketing communications from Northwestern University's Medill School of Journalism. She earned bachelor's degrees in journalism and English from the University of Maryland.

